The Ann Robertson Centre is a conference, education and training centre which can be hired for all business purposes, informal meetings, training, interviews, hot-desking and more. It is owned and operated by Pilgrims Hospices and adjoins the charity's Canterbury hospice in London Road.

Named after Ann Robertson, the founder of Pilgrims Hospices, all profits from the centre will go towards the running costs of the hospices at Canterbury, Ashford and Thanet. Pilgrims Hospices provides free care to patients with life-limiting illness across east Kent.

The Geoffrey Chaucer room (ground floor) and William Harvey room (first floor)

These rooms can seat 12 people in boardroom style or up to 20 in theatre style. Each room is equipped with a large flatscreen TV with laptop and projector connections. These rooms have air conditioning facilities. The Geoffrey Chaucer room has the additional benefit of a hearing loop.

The Charles Dickens room (first floor)

The largest room can seat 30 people in theatre style or 15 in classroom or boardroom styles. It has a large flat screen TV, hearing loop, laptop and projector connections. This room has air conditioning facilities.
